Olin takes No. 1 in entrepreneurship, Judy and Jerry Kent, BSBA ’78, MBA ’79, lay down a scholarship challenge and Megan Berry, MBA ’15, talks startups and her pandemic pivot.

$2M scholarship challenge to benefit Olin students

Judy and Jerry Kent, BSBA ’78, MBA ’79, are both longtime supporters of the university. They’re funding a new challenge that runs until the goal is met.

‘You can’t get lucky if you don’t try’

Megan Berry, MBA ’15, discusses her startup, how she pivoted because of the pandemic and life as an entrepreneur.
Business journal shines light on Olin alum

The St. Louis Business Journal names Ryan Harbison, MBA '19, a “40 Under 40” leader. He’s a US Marine veteran who is general manager of Breeze Helicopters.

We’re No. 1—again!

For the third consecutive year, WashU Olin placed No. 1 on the Poets & Quants ranking of MBA entrepreneurship programs. And “it wasn’t close at all.”

Women, take a seat at the table

Registration is now open for the annual Women’s Leadership Forum, and Boeing executive Katie Voss, an alum of the program, highly recommends it.

You be the judge

Each semester in our WashU Hatchery class, students work in teams to take a new business idea from conception to competition. Interested in judging for the Hatchery Olin Cup? Sign up here to be a virtual judge on November 30 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Questions? Reach out to rianedwards@wustl.edu.

You be the judge II

Help judge two-minute video pitches this semester. Olin's BIG IdeaBounce® is back. Pitches will be ready to judge on November 16 and will wrap up by November 29. The goal is for each judge to rate five to 10 pitches on their own time. The prize pool is $15,000. But what students value the most is your feedback. Questions? Reach out to rianedwards@wustl.edu.
