Philip H. Dybvig shares the 2022 Nobel Prize in economic sciences.

Nobel Prize goes to Olin professor

Philip H. Dybvig’s research explained why banks are subject to runs during crises. He’s one of three economists to share the 2022 Nobel Prize in economic sciences.

Back-burner burnout

Peter Boumgarden shares some tips for how to stem the tide of workers who experience fatigue and low productivity.

An informal Olin ambassador

“Many prospective students reach out to me via LinkedIn, and I am always willing to share about my experience at Olin,” says Destiny Davis, MBA 2020.

How to fit in an EMBA

It’s possible to find work-life balance and pursue your passion—especially if that passion is a life-changing degree.
“Values-based, data-driven” daily

Olin "groomed me to identify, structure and navigate the continual onslaught of competing business priorities," says Ray Wagner, MBA 2021.

Upcoming course in Executive Education

Coming November 10: Learn to successfully align employees and resources to support corporate goals and directives, and to identify conflicts between strategy and internal processes. Learn more and register.

Judges wanted

We need judges for two big events in November. Olin’s BIG IdeaBounce® starts November 17. Judge two-minute video pitches on your own time. Pitches will be ready from November 17–27, and they’ll be significantly curated, so you’ll only see the best. Click here to sign up. The Hatchery Olin Cup is 4–6 p.m. CT, November 19 via Zoom. Student teams will compete to win the prized Olin Cup. Sign up here.

Early-stage investors wanted

We’re seeking professional early-stage investors to attend our Final League Pitch Day from 4–6 p.m., November 28 via Zoom. Our League Advanced Accelerator Students will pitch to angel investors, venture capitalists and accelerators. To attend, please contact rianedwards@wustl.edu.
